

QS has added a new ranking to its increasing range of typologies: the 'Next 50 under 50' extends the QS 'Top 50 under 50' Rankings, making a combined listing of the top 100 universities from the QS World University Rankings that have been founded or established in the last 50 years. It is designed to highlight those universities where 'performances in teaching and research are increasingly impressive given their age and resources'.

In this year's edition, University of Crete has been ranked 81-90.

Given the impact of the prolonged crises on research and education in Greece, this is a particularly impressive testimony to the success of faculty and researchers in maintaining high quality research performance.
